

Outdoor Learning Area

By Fernando, Sebastian, Merle, Anja

Outdoor Learning Area

Students need

FRESH AIR

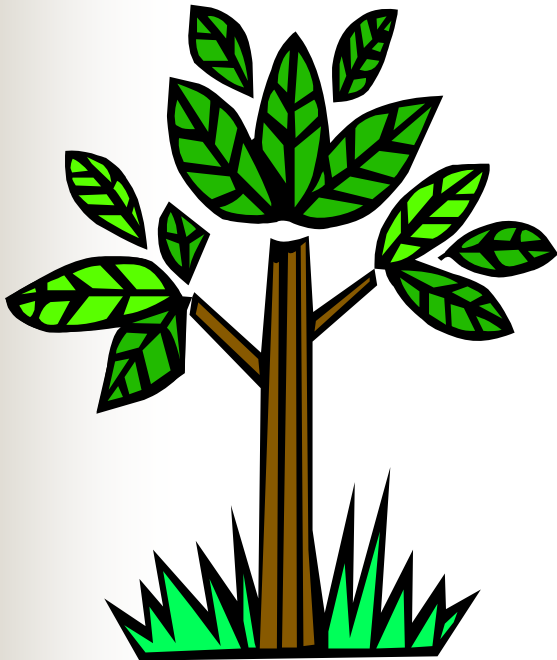

MOVEMENT

LOTS OF ROOM

and

FLEXIBILITY

to learn

Outdoor Learning Area

Therefore we think it is a good idea to build round tables with benches all around them in the garden of the language centre at our university.

Outdoor Learning Area

Round tables promote communication.

When students are outside, they are more lively and motivated.

They can move around more freely, from person to person and from table to table.

Outdoor Learning Area

The students can sit at the tables or in the grass.

The teacher can move from group to group, help and give advice.

Outdoor Learning Area

The Outdoor Learning Area should be near a university building such as the language centre, because students still need material.

The teacher might also need a CD-player or similar equipment.

Outdoor Learning Area

The combination of free group learning in an outdoor environment would be very stimulating for the students.

Apart from studying they could also stay there and do sports, watch films or get involved in other activities.

Outdoor Learning Area

The Outdoor Learning Area would become a complex area, combining group learning, with or without teachers, recreation and individual study.

